For Maple Street, two walks, each 1½ hours in length, have been outlined on the map. Each outlined stop is keyed to the text presented here.

For further information about material presented in this brochure, or about future guided tours, contact the Springfield History Dept., 220 Maple Street, Springfield, Massachusetts.

KEY
O Stop on tour
Path of tour
Scale: 1 inch = 30 feet

46 103 Mill Street
This large Tudor-styled house was built in 1905 for Malcolm Reids, the manager of the Springfield Republican. It was a cost of $10,000, from plans of the local architectural firm of Kirkham & Parlin. The house had a large piece of property and it stabled was set aside for the eastern corner of the house.

47 103 Mill Street
Built in 1869 for the Rev. Samuel Buckingham, pastor of South Congregational Church. The house was bought by Samuel Reynolds in 1870. He moved to New Hampshire in 1873. It remained in the family until 1926. As a benefactor of the Ames Mill Co., he frequently visited the mill. He was an avid gardener. Mr. Reynolds was a lifelong friend of professional architect, Mr. Smith of the firm of Ware and Almon. He was responsible for the design of the original building.

48 127 Maple Street
Built in 1898 for Miss Sarah Brink. It was a cost of $13,000. The house was designed by the local architectural firm of Kirkham and Parlin and it is the earliest example of Georgian Revival architecture in Springfield.

49 7 Crescent Hill
It is a fine example of Shingle Style architecture. It was built in 1888 by Samuel J. Wesson, with his wife, Sarah M. Wesson, as a summer home. The house was designed by Almon and Church.

51 1 Crescent Hill
This is the carriage house that accompanied the large brick house, which was located about 200 feet north of the carriage house in the rear of the property. The house was built in 1884-85 for George L. Howard, a prominent industrialist. It was designed by Clarent Vacek, an influential New York architect, and the house was extensively modified by "without doubt the most distinguished architect in the country, as well as being in the hands of Mrs. Morgan, who was the housekeeper, in the family until her death in 1928. Since then the house has been occupied by the family of Mrs. Morgan's sister, Mrs. Morgan's daughter, and it is located in Springfield, Massachusetts.

For further information about material presented in this brochure, or about future guided tours, contact the Springfield History Dept., 220 Maple Street, Springfield, Massachusetts.

For Maple Street, two walks, each 1½ hours in length, have been outlined on the map. Each outlined stop is keyed to the text presented here.

For further information about material presented in this brochure, or about future guided tours, contact the Springfield History Dept., 220 Maple Street, Springfield, Massachusetts.
The fifty-five apartments and 278 rooms of the house, which were occupied by John Mayer (the first resident) and his family, were located at number 72 and Park Street from 1873 to 1894.

Reading House

In 1890, John G. Murray of the firm of Murray & Brown designed an apartment house in Reading for Mr. and Mrs. John H. Murray. The house was built on the corner of Chestnut and Main Streets, and was one of the first apartment houses in Reading. It consisted of four stories, with a basement, and had a total of twenty rooms, including a large living room and a library. The house was owned by Mr. Murray and occupied by him and his family until 1907.

Central Railroad Station

The Central Railroad Station in Springfield was completed in 1894 and opened for service on the 15th of January. The station was designed by the architect George E. Fuller and was constructed of red brick. The station had a large main hall with a high ceiling and was considered one of the finest railroad stations in the country.